L'acciaio inossidabile è una lega a base di ferro e carbonio che per passivazione, cioè attraverso una pellicola protettiva che si forma a contatto con l'atmosfera, diventa resistente alla corrosione da parte degli agenti esterni e soprattutto resistente alla ruggine. Ne esistono di più tipi, comunemente identificati con la sigla AISI (acronimo inglese American Iron and Steel Institute) che ne codifica il tipo (AISI 304, AISI 316, AISI 430, ecc.) e l'eventuale aggiunta di una lettera che ne specifica la presenza di un particolare componente nella struttura della lega. OML ha scelto di utilizzare acciaio inox AISI 304 in alcuni particolari e AISI 316L, dove L sta per low carbon, cioè a basso contenuto di carbonio, che impedisce alle impurità di penetrare. L'AISI 316L è un tipo di acciaio molto resistente alla corrosione, quindi particolarmente adatto alle zone marine e termali. L'acciaio è un materiale inerte (non emette sostanze nocive per l'ambiente o per l'uomo a contatto con l'aria o l'acqua), mantenendosi quindi puro e altamente igienico.

L'acciaio inossidabile è considerato un materiale ecologico che per essere prodotto richiede temperature molto inferiori a quelle utilizzate per la produzione di altri metalli.

La caratteristica di materiale ecologico è conferita anche dalla durata di vita dei prodotti. La resistenza meccanica determina infatti la durezza dell'acciaio e quindi dei suoi manufatti. Inoltre è riciclabile al 100%.

Per mantenere le caratteristiche del prodotto è sufficiente pulirlo con un panno o una spugnetta morbida e una comune crema detergente diluita, risciacquarlo ed asciugarlo. Gli eventuali depositi di calcare o di ferro provenienti dall'acqua si eliminano facilmente utilizzando prodotti specifici per la pulizia dell'acciaio inossidabile. Questi sono facilmente reperibili in commercio. Possono risultare dannosi detersivi a base di candeggina o acido cloridrico (muriatico), in quanto potrebbero deteriorare il film naturale protettivo dell'acciaio inox. Altra avvertenza importante è quella di non utilizzare mai pagliette abrasive metalliche che potrebbero rilasciare sulla superficie dei prodotti dei residui ferrosi che darebbero origine a macchie di ruggine. Tuttavia, a fronte di eventuali graffi della superficie, è da ricordare che l'acciaio è sempre ripristinabile per lavorazione meccanica, sia con la lucidatura sia con la satinatura.

Stainless steel is an alloy of iron and carbon that becomes resistant thanks to a protective film that is formed in contact with the atmosphere. Thanks to this film stainless steel is corrosion and rust resistant. There are more types of stainless steel, commonly identified with the abbreviation AISI (English acronym American Iron and Steel Institute) that encodes the type (AISI 304, AISI 316, AISI 430, etc.) and the possible addition of a letter that specifies the presence of a particular component in the structure of the alloy. OML chose to use AISI 304 stainless steel (in some particulars) and AISI 316L stainless steel, where "L" means "low carbon" (low carbon content) that prevents the impurities to penetrate. 316L AISI is a type of highly corrosion-resistant stainless steel and for this reason it is especially suitable for marine and spa areas. Steel is an inert material (it does not emit harmful substances to the environment or to humans in contact with air or with water) remaining pure and highly hygienic.

Stainless steel is considered an ecological material because it is produced using lower temperatures than other metals and for the life of the products. The mechanical strength determines the durability of the steel and of its artifacts. It is also 100% recyclable.

In order to keep the characteristics of the steel it is enough to clean it with a cloth or a soft sponge and a common cleansing cream diluted with water, to rinse and dry it. You can easily remove any deposits of limestone or iron using specific products for the cleaning of the stainless steel. You can easily find them on the market. Detergents containing bleach or hydrochloric acid (muriatic) are harmful as they may deteriorate the natural protective film of the stainless steel. Do not use abrasive scourers that may release on the surface of the products iron residuals, causing rust stains. However, in case of scratches, it is important to remember that stainless steel is always restorable with mechanical processing.

Miele is made of Aisi 316L stainless steel, available in satin and polished versions.

Miele è un dispenser per sapone liquido innovativo essendo privo di pompetta. Per il suo utilizzo, si estrae lo stelo dal contenitore dal quale scende il sapone che viene raccolto posizionando la mano sotto, come illustrato nell'immagine.

Miele (the English meaning is "honey") is an innovative dispenser as it is free of the pump. For using it, you have to pull out the stem from the container and to collect the liquid soap with your hand, as shown in the picture.

8.

1.

Togliere la pellicola del biadesivo dalle squadrette.
Peel off the thin-film of the bioadhesive from the support brackets.

2.

Applicare le squadrette al supporto e mettere il collante come in figura (nel p.salvietta si utilizza una squadretta ogni supporto nella parte superiore)
Fix the brackets to the wall support and put the glue on it as per picture (for towel racks use one bracket for every wall support and fix the bracket on the upper part of the wall support)

3.

Pulire accuratamente le piastrelle con alcool dove si applica l'accessorio.
Clean the tiles carefully by using alcohol where the accessory is going to be fixed.

4.

Posizionare l'accessorio e premere fino a che il collante esce dai bordi e premere le squadrette con il biadesivo.
Set the item to the tile and press until the glue comes out of the sides. Press the support brackets with bioadhesive too.

5.

Togliere la ceramica e non utilizzare per 24 ore.
Do not insert any piece of ceramic in the wall support for 24 hours.

6.

Togliere le squadrette, il biadesivo e il collante fuoriuscito con una spatolina o simile.
Remove the support brackets, the bioadhesive and the coming out glue by using a spatula or the like.

7.

Mettere le ceramiche sulle proprie sedi.
Insert every ceramic piece in its own place.

8.

Se si desidera staccare il supporto utilizzare una spatolina.
If you want to remove the support from the wall use a spatula.
