CONFINDUSTRIA MARMOMACCHINE - Profile

The Italian MARMOMACCHINE Association (abbreviated to CONFINDUSTRIA MARMOMACCHINE), founded in 1984 as an association of makers and users of machinery and equipment to work natural stone, is the Association in the stone sector representing the entire Italian techno-stone production chain. The more than 310 companies and territorial organizations belonging to Confindustria Marmomacchine and working in all the major Italian production sectors guarantee the Association broad representation nationally and internationally as well as the role of reference management liaison for Confindustria, Italian ministries, ICE (the Italian Trade Agency), standardization boards, unions, universities and fair boards.

Confindustria Marmomacchine is a part of Confindustria (the General Confederation of Italian Industry) and of Federmacchine (the Italian Association of Instrumental Goods Makers). Confindustria Marmomacchine represents and safeguards the Italian techno-stone industry as sole employers' association involved in nationwide collective labor bargaining in the stone and extraction sector and in all the activities connected to relations with sector unions. Confindustria Marmomacchine is a member of Euroroc, the European and International Stone Industries Federation.

Basaltina® was used by the ancient Romans to build the roads and monuments of their empire. Throughout the centuries the quarries had been constantly exploited by local craftsmen.

In 1925, Giuseppe Tecchi Cristofori Celiani managed to consolidate the quarries under one single owner. His life's dream came true and Basaltina S.r.l. was founded. Since the very beginning the Company has been committed to develop its technology and to improve its excavation and manufacturing process. This has allowed Basaltina to quickly grow and become a company internationally recognised. Basaltina® stone has given life to some of the most famous architects projects and creations around the world.
