MOTHER EARTH AFRICA

Model : TEA

Leather : Calf stamp Alce bottalato

Interior Lining : All the interiors of the bags are made of a washable synthetic lining.

Top Handles : They are in pressed vegetable Cuoio, cut and smoothed by hand, dyed with natural aniline in the color Ebony, the main feature of the aniline is transparency, it does not cover any defect on the contrary, in the presence of a scar or an insect bite, the aniline stands out, since the color, at that point, is seen different, almost always darker. To be able to talk about the effects of aniline on Cuoio we must first understand what aniline is. Aniline is an organic compound based on carbon, absolutely transparent, allows you to color the skin without changing its natural appearance. All the characteristics of the animal's coat are preserved, including shades of color, healed wounds and even insect bites.

At the end of the dyeing with Aniline all the Cuoio pieces are hand polished with special waxes.

Construction : Bag built by hand like a maxi weave, there are no shapes or machines for its construction, but only the manual skill of the craftsman who builds the pieces and assembles them by weaving them up to the construction of the bag. It recalls the first woven chestnut baskets that the Buti family already made in their Artisan Factory over 60 years ago.

MOTHER EARTH AFRICA: For these characteristics and for the colors presented in this group, the Ebony for the handles, the Salmon and the Lamb, the Branch and the Geranium, the Lion and the yellow Pineapple, We want to recall the origins of humanity, the hope of peoples; the African people, who despite abuses, wars and famines have never lost the will for redemption. Africa represents a heritage of food and animal biodiversity to be safeguarded. African art with its canons of beauty has influenced from Modigliani to Picasso to Paul Gauguin, and many others in the 1900s.

Ebony is the guiding color of this palette with warm and colorful notes.

ECOSYSTEM / ECO-SUSTAINABLE

Model : 1630

Historic design of the Maison Buti of enormous success in the 70s, revisited in details and proportions, the new 1630 offers a mix of tastes, combining the 70s with the contemporary making the new current model for the modern woman.

Leather : Very light and snappy Incrociati leathers with 90% vegetable tanning: A process based on the use of natural tannins from trees, used using new technologies and on the slow passage of time so that the process is absorbed by the leather.

The “vegetable tanning” is the most traditional and recognizable; the only one capable of imparting unmistakable properties, versatility of use and uniqueness of the product to the CUOIO (to the leather).

Lining : All the interiors are made of a lining made with the recovery of Apple waste. The sustainable lining is produced using derivatives as residues from industrial apple processing.

Not only are the costs of waste management and related damage to the environment saved: this natural waste is used to replace other raw materials of chemical origin in the product, lowering emissions and energy consumption throughout the production chain.

Details with Cuoio : Details in pressed vegetable Cuoio, cut and smoothed by hand, dyed with natural aniline in the color Ebony, the main feature of the aniline is transparency, it does not cover any defect on the contrary, in the presence of a scar or an insect bite, the aniline stands out, since the color, at that point, is seen different, almost always darker. To be able to talk about the effects of aniline on leather we must first understand what aniline is. Aniline is an organic compound based on carbon, absolutely transparent, allows you to color the skin without changing its natural appearance. All the characteristics of the leather are preserved, including shades of color, healed wounds and even insect bites. At the end of the dyeing with Aniline all the Cuoio pieces are hand polished with special waxes.

Lightness and Versatility : Bags made with these leathers, linings and accessories are extremely light and at the same time very resistant to use. They can be worn as a Day Bag on all occasions of the day being an Elegant Classic with a touch of Sportiness that makes them very practical and easy to combine with colors and clothes. A unique mix for the modern woman, always with limited minutes and numerous daily commitments: Transfers, Work, Family, Hobbies...

ECOSYSTEM, ECO-SUSTAINABILITY : Protecting, Saving, Safeguarding the earth and nature is a requirement.

Climate change, with the consequences it brings with it, requires us to make a greater commitment to make different choices with a new and renewed sensitivity.

Eco-sustainability: Even our Company is deeply committed to this task, an all-Italian short production chain, research of new advanced technologies, recovery of eco-sustainable materials.

The colors of the Earth, the Neutrals, the natural fibers, the sage green, the oranges, the vegetable tanning with natural tannins.
