THE OLFACTORY PYRAMID

The base note

the soul of a perfume. The base note encapsulates dense perfumes, rich fragrances, extracted from woods, resins and spices, which generate a refreshing sensation, like essences of basil, cinnamon, cedar, cypress, cloves fennel, juniper, incense, rosewood, myrtle, mountain pine, patchouli, sandalwood and ginger.

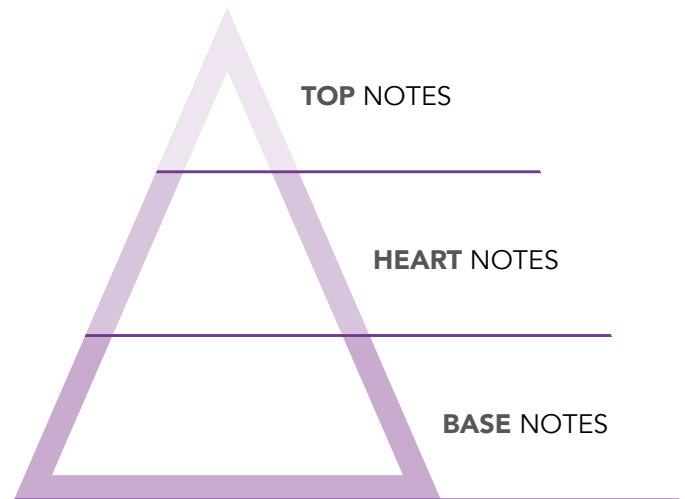

The heart note

the distinctive trait of a fragrance. The heart note encapsulates soft and floral scents, with rebalancing and vitalising sensations which have an effect on our emotions. This note is represented by essences of wild camomile, geranium, lavender, neroli, Scots pine, oregano, rosemary, clary sage, verbena and ylang ylang.

The top note

light, fresh fragrances which evaporate quickly. These are the most volatile essences, the first to be perceived, and they affect our moods. They include essences of bitter orange, sweet orange, bergamot, cajeput, lemongrass, eucalyptus globulus, jasmine, peppermint, myrrh, grapefruit, sage, tea tree, red thyme.

Perfume
is like a musical note, intense and volatile.

Lavender (Lavandula Angustifolia or English Lavender)

This sweet, floral and balsamic fragrance is one of the most widely used in aromatherapy and is known as the essential oil of peace and harmony. It has an effect on the nervous system, helping to:

- rebalance and harmonise our emotions
- prepare for meditation and reading
- regenerate the epidermis
- It also acts on the respiratory system

Calendula (Calendula officinalis)

Excellent for skin care and cleansing, for centuries it has been appreciated for its significant softening and emollient properties. Its extracts are often used in creams and ointments to contrast skin irritation and inflammation.

Cornflower (Centaurea Cyanus)

A flower associated with well-being, characterised by powerful decongestant, purifying and invigorating properties. Rich in flavonoids and other antioxidant substances, it is a highly effective aid to skin health and to help prevent wrinkles.

Camomile (Chamomilla recutita)

Regarded as a beauty product for its emollient, soothing, protective and purifying properties, it is used as a soothing, decongestant, softening and calming remedy. Camomile has antioxidant qualities and is highly tolerated by even the most sensitive skins.

plants used by Cascina Cabasse

Witch Hazel

Used by Native Americans as a wound healing agent, it provides excellent protection against sunburn. Its decongestant properties are useful in preventing damage by free radicals and as an emollient for dry skin.

Helichrysum (Helichrysum italicum)

Helichrysum, with its gold-coloured flowers, has anti-inflammatory, anti-allergic and astringent properties. Its active ingredients help soothe the epidermis thanks to their decongestant and protective action.

Rosemary (Rosmarinus Officinalis)

A plant rich in essential oils and with antioxidant, antibacterial, energising, sebum-balancing properties, which can help inhibit cellular oxidation.

Shea Butter (Buthyrospermum parkii butter)

This yellow substance of vegetable origin, derived from the Buthyrospermum parkii tree, is semi-solid at room temperature. Its remarkable emollient, nourishing and moisturising properties make it the perfect skincare ally and great for regenerating the skin barrier.

Shea creates a natural protective film over the skin, helping to hydrate it, as well as protecting it from external agents such as wind, cold and heat.

Aloe Vera (Aloe barbadensis)

The main benefit of aloe vera is its soothing and moisturising action. It has refreshing characteristics and preserves cell hydration. Aloe vera also has a strong anti-oxidant effect. In addition to all this, aloe gel also seems to be able to simulate the production of collagen and elastin, helping contrast the effects of skin ageing. Aloe is traditionally credited with healing, soothing and anti-redness properties.
