- Mariantonia Urru gives to weaving multiple meanings: a link between past and present, a link between innovation and tradition, as for tradition of making.
- Mariantonia Urru looks to the future, maintaining a quality of product and crafts that originally belongs to the past and which are a great heritage of technical and cultural value.
- Mariantonia Urru opens the door to the collaboration with international designers, supporting them in the research of technical solutions and supporting the various formal results.
- Mariantonia Urru intends to promote the territory by making sharing of knowledge and communication the basis of its innovative path.

The Sardinian techniques, especially the Pibiones, have a three-dimensionality that we exalt by making the artefact on several levels. In Mediterranean, designed by Paulina Herrera and winner of the first prize in DIART 2015, the concept of the work is a reflection of the relationships between the different cultures that face the Mediterranean sea, represented by a marine context crossed by fishes. The water flow is represented by a blue band woven in Pibiones, travelling from side to side, crossing the sea. The sea is woven in Litzos with a yarn made of three different materials: wool, linen and cotton. The composition of the yarn based on three materials and the three-dimensionality of the points arranged in an apparently random manner give vibrant light reflections that recreate the wavering sheen of the sea surface."

Founded in 1895, Taborelli has continued through the ages, crossing boundaries, revolutions and evolutions, to transform itself from a local-based silk weaver to a modern industrial group. Today we are one of the largest European producers in the womenswear industry with more than 400 looms: an efficient mix of manual artisan skills and industrial productivity. Thanks to an extensive fleet of state-of-the-art machinery and to a network of local suppliers, we can deliver large volumes in fast turnaround times. Our choices are all customer-focused: we have developed a range of bespoke services, featuring speed, creativity and quality. We started out in an area that is traditionally dedicated to working with silk, and our master weavers are experts when it comes to making the most of their looms and the talents of our designers. Our operations are structured into four lines: womenswear, ties, scarves and interior decoration. Since 2009 in fact we have been creating and manufacturing finished fabrics for furnishings destined to the domestic and international markets. Taborelli offers a wide range of products for both the residential and the contract market. Yarn dyed single and double width qualities: from natural blends (silk, linen, cotton and wool) to recycled polyester and Trevira CS. We are also specialised in printed warp technique mainly on polyester (standard and recycled) and Trevira CS warps.
