

Il Governo saudita avvia le fasi 2 e 3

Le autorità saudite hanno annunciato una serie di decisioni finalizzate alla ripresa delle attività economico-sociali in relazione alla diffusione del Covid-19.

Nella fase 2, che durerà fino al 20 giugno, si potrà uscire tra le 6 e le 20 ed i voli nazionali, ma non quelli internazionali, potranno riprendere. In tutte le moschee, tranne che alla Mecca, sarà possibile tornare a pregare, nel rispetto delle misure di distanziamento fisico e sanitarie. In questa seconda fase non saranno invece ancora possibili le riunioni con più di 50 persone, compresi matrimoni e funerali. E' stata cancellata la sospensione delle attività sia nel settore pubblico che nel settore privato.

Nella fase 3, che inizierà il 21 giugno, tutte le misure precauzionali ed i divieti imposti precedentemente al coprifuoco saranno sospesi e tutte le attività economico-sociali riprenderanno pienamente, sempre nel rispetto delle misure igienico-sanitarie essenziali (utilizzo mascherine, frequente igienizzazione, ecc.) e del principio di distanziamento sociale. Fino ad oggi sono stati registrati 87.142 casi, di cui 64.306 guariti e 525 deceduti.

Arabia Saudita: parzialmente revocato il coprifuoco, la Mecca resta chiusa

L'Arabia Saudita ha parzialmente revocato il 26 aprile le restrizioni al coprifuoco imposte in tutto il Regno, pur mantenendo un blocco completo alla Mecca e nei quartieri precedentemente isolati, secondo l'ordine reale impartito del re Salman bin Abdulaziz. L'annuncio della televisione di stato ha confermato che sarà possibile uscire di casa dalle 9:00 alle 17:00 fino al 13 maggio, il ventesimo giorno del Ramadan, il mese sacro per i musulmani. Alcune attività economiche e commerciali, come i rivenditori all'ingrosso e al dettaglio, nonché i centri commerciali, riprenderanno dal 29 aprile al 13 maggio. Saloni di bellezza, barbieri, club sportivi, palestre, centri ricreativi, cinema, ristoranti, caffè e altre attività continueranno invece ad essere chiusi.

Nuove misure per il coprifuoco durante il mese Ramadan

L'agenzia di stampa saudita "Spa" ha dichiarato che le autorità hanno deciso di ridurre le ore di coprifuoco imposte a diverse città durante il mese del Ramadan per consentire ai cittadini di avere più tempo per acquistare i beni di prima necessità nel quartiere in cui risiedono. Le persone dovranno rimanere a casa per 16 ore al giorno, dalle 17:00 fino alle 9:00. Una fonte del ministero dell'Interno ha affermato che le restrizioni si applicano alle persone che non vivono in città sotto un blocco di 24 ore.

I residenti sottoposti al coprifuoco 24 ore su 24 sono obbligati a restare presso il proprio domicilio tutto il giorno se non per soddisfare esigenze essenziali o in caso di necessità, ad esempio per fare la spesa e per cure mediche.

Il ministero ha anche affermato che il viaggio in auto sarebbe limitato a una persona oltre al conducente nelle città sottoposte a blocco di 24 ore.

Permesso di viaggio unificato da applicare iniziando dal prossimo martedì in Arabia Saudita

Una fonte ufficiale presso il Ministero dell'Interno ha annunciato di aver aggiornato i permessi di viaggio durante il coprifuoco per le categorie di eccezione con un nuovo modulo unificato, che sarà valido in tutte le regioni del Regno e avrà effetto a partire dalle 15:00 di martedì 21 aprile 2020. L'approvazione del nuovo permesso unificato fa seguito al comunicato del ministero del 12 aprile 2020 sull'importanza di identificare quelli necessari per viaggiare tra i dipendenti dei settori vitali e coloro che lavorano in attività che sono state esentate durante il coprifuoco.

Arabia Saudita: stanziati 500 milioni di dollari per combattere il coronavirus

L'Arabia Saudita, che attualmente detiene la presidenza del G20, ha promesso lo stanziamento di 500 milioni di dollari per sostenere gli sforzi globali per combattere la pandemia di coronavirus. Il Regno arabo stanzierà 150 milioni di dollari alla Coalizione per la preparazione e l'innovazione epidemica, 150 milioni di dollari all'Alleanza globale per vaccini e vaccinazioni e 200 milioni di dollari ad altre organizzazioni e programmi sanitari internazionali e regionali. Secondo l'emittente satellitare panaraba "Al Arabiya", il governo saudita ha inoltre invitato tutti i paesi, le organizzazioni non governative, le filantropie e il settore privato a contribuire a colmare una lacuna finanziaria stimata in oltre 8 miliardi di dollari per combattere la pandemia da Covid-19. L'Arabia Saudita ha annunciato una multa fino a un milione di riyal (266 mila dollari) per gli operatori che tentano frodi commerciali. Il governo ha incoraggiato i cittadini a continuare a denunciare casi di frode commerciale, con premi fino al 25 per cento dell'ammenda pagata.

Riyadh Office

24-hour curfew enforced in many cities, governorates

Saudi Arabia has enforced 24-hour daily curfew in all parts of the cities of Riyadh, Tabuk, Dammam, Dhahran, and Hafouf as well as in the governorates of Jeddah, Taif, Qatif and Al-Khobar, with effective immediately on Monday until further notice. All entries to and exit from these cities and governorates are banned, Saudi Press Agency reported on Monday quoting an official source at the Ministry of Interior.

The ministry had earlier enforced a 24-hour daily curfew in Makkah and Madinah, effective from last Thursday.

The official said curfew exemptions still apply to those in vital public and private sectors such as security, military and media. Those who work in health services are also excluded from the curfew.

Curfew imposed in Saudi Arabia's Dammam, Taif and Qatif governorates

A curfew in Saudi Arabia's Dammam, Taif and Qatif will start on Friday 3p.m. until further notice, state news agency SPA reported, citing Saudi Arabia's Ministry of Interior.

An exception will be made to services and activities previously announced by the ministry. The decision is part of the country's efforts to curb the spread of coronavirus. The interior ministry implemented a 24-hour curfew in some districts in Jeddah and the two holy cities on Thursday to limit the spread of coronavirus.

Saudi ministry allocates $4.5 billion to cushion impact of COVID-19 crisis on workers

The Saudi Ministry of Human Resources and Social Development has allocated SR17 billion ($4.5 billion) to deal with the economic and jobs fallout from the coronavirus crisis.

Nasser bin Abdulrahman Al-Hazani, a spokesperson for the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Development, said that the outlay was in line with the Kingdom's efforts to contain the outbreak while supporting the private sector, economic growth and employment.

Under new ministry rules, expat workers whose residency permits (iqama) expire before June 30 will be exempt from financial fees and their permits extended for three months, he said.

He added that under the Saudi labor system employees cannot be forced to take unpaid leave without their consent.

Major Saudi energy firms pledge 525 million SAR (140 million $) in fight against coronavirus

Major Saudi energy companies have contributed a whopping 140 million $ to the country's Health Endowment Fund, Saudi Press Agency reported on Wednesday.

The move follows the King Salman's call for support to the national health efforts being made to combat the pandemic and the directives of Crown Prince Muhammad Bin Salman, deputy premier and minister of defense, who is continuously monitoring the coordination and cooperation among various government agencies.

The Health Endowment Fund is a legal entity established by a decision of the Cabinet and aims to enhance the role of society in supporting government efforts in health development.

Out of the total 140 million dollars contribution to the fund, 54 million dollars came from Saudi Aramco.

In a separate announcement, the Saudi Electricity Company (SEC) and its partners pledged 8 million dollars contribution, while the company's contractors and suppliers vowed a contribution of 6.5 million dollars.

Saudi Arabia orders lockdown in Makkah, Madinah, Riyadh

An order issued by the King Salman on Wednesday prohibits people of all the 13 provinces of the Kingdom from leaving the region or moving to another region.

The order takes effect on Thursday 26th of March, the Saudi Press Agency reported. The royal order also bans people from entering or exiting the boundaries of Makkah, Madinah and Riyadh.

In a larger effort to contain the spread of the deadly coronavirus, the recently imposed curfew will begin at 3 p.m. instead of 7 p.m. in the cities of Makkah, Madinah and Riyadh.

The new directives will come into effect from Thursday afternoon until the end of the curfew period announced in an earlier order of the King.

Partial Curfew For 21 Days In Saudi Arabia

King Salman bin Abdulaziz has issued a curfew order from 7 pm until 6 am for a period of 21 days, effective from 23rd of March evening, to limit the spread of coronavirus in the Kingdom. Some workers will be exempt from the curfew. These include employees of the vital parts of the public and private sectors whose work requires continued performance during the prevention period, the government said. It also includes employees in the security, military and media sectors, and those in relevant health and service sectors. The ministry urged citizens to stay in their homes, especially during the curfew, and not to leave except in cases of necessity.

Saudi Arabia announces $32 billion in emergency funds to mitigate oil, coronavirus impact Saudi Arabia's government unveiled stimulus measures amounting to 120 Saudi billion riyals ($32 billion) on Friday to support an economy hit by the double blow of the coronavirus crisis and dramatically lower oil prices.

The sum includes Riyadh's 50 billion riyals package announced last week to support small and medium-sized businesses. Friday's announcement introduces a further 70 billion riyals to aid businesses, including the postponement of tax payments and exemptions of various government levies and fees.

Earlier this week, the kingdom cut its 2020 budget by almost 5%, a step that many economists predict will be the first of a series of cutbacks and potentially even austerity measures to keep its finances intact amid oil prices plunging by nearly 60% year-to-date.

The relief measures in the new stimulus package include exemptions on expat levies, postponing some private sector fee payments to the government, and postponing the collection of customs duties on imports. It also allows employers to extend exit and re-entry visas free of charge for three months and enables businesses to postpone paying value-added tax, income tax and other levies for the next three months.

"Some budget appropriations will be reviewed and reallocated to the sectors most in need in the current situation, including allocating additional funds to the health sector as needed," the statement quoted Finance Minister Mohammed al-Jadaan as saying.

"An emergency budget was also introduced to cover any costs that may arise during the developments of this global crisis."

Saudi Arabia has taken sweeping measures to stem the spread of the coronavirus, including suspending numerous flight routes and temporarily halting entries for religious pilgrims coming to the kingdom for Hajj, a journey taken by some two million Muslims annually.

Oil price plunge and hit to fiscal plans

Riyadh earlier this month set off an oil price war, slashing its prices to buyers, and plans to increase its oil production from a recent 9.7 million barrels per day (bpd) to 12.3 million bpd in a strategy to increase its market share. This, coupled with crushed demand from the coronavirus, could plunge crude prices into the teens, analysts say. International benchmark Brent crude was trading at $28.28 a barrel on Friday at 12:40 p.m. ET.

Saudi Arabia needs oil priced at $82 per barrel to balance its budget, according to the International Monetary Fund — “which means Riyadh’s fiscal plans and the Saudi economy will suffer a big blow,” a report from Energy Intelligence wrote this week. The analysis firm predicts the kingdom’s flagship Vision 2030 economic reform plan will suffer a significant setback as well.

Saudi Customs suspends export of medicines, pharmaceuticals, medical devices

Export of medicines, pharmaceuticals and medical equipment has been suspended, Saudi Press Agency reported on Thursday quoting an announcement made by the Saudi Customs in a circular.

The move, which comes into effect on Friday (March 20), follows the recommendations of the ministerial committee tasked to take precautionary measures to prevent the outbreak spread of the Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19).

The temporary ban also includes what was announced earlier with regard to export of all medical and laboratory products, requirements and devices used in detecting or preventing infection with the virus, including protective clothing, medical face masks, protective medical suits covering the whole body, and protective medical goggles.

Saudi Arabia suspending domestic flights, mass land transport in fight against COVID-19

Saudi Arabia has suspended domestic flights, trains, buses and taxis for 14 days in a heightened effort to stop the spread of the COVID-19, the Saudi Press Agency (SPA) said on Friday. Quoting a directive from the Ministry of Interior, SPA said the new measure will take effect at 6 a.m. on Saturday, March 21, 2020. Only flights related to humanitarian and necessary cases, medical evacuation aircraft and private aviation would be allowed, provided that they are covered by the necessary permits issued by the Civil Aviation Authority. Only flights related to humanitarian and necessary cases, medical evacuation aircraft and private aviation would be allowed, provided that they are covered by the necessary permits issued by the Civil Aviation Authority. Cargo ships will be allowed to continue with their usual program, provided that the crews take all precautions to limit the transmission of infection.

Transportation related to vital sectors such as health, services and basic commodities such as food, energy, water and communications, etc., air freight and necessary security transfers will not be affected by the temporary ban, said the SPA report.
