

AGGIORNAMENTO BREXIT SUL VINO 19/12/2023

Labelling wine imported into England from 1 January 2024

From 1 January 2024, new labelling rules come into effect for all wine imported into England. Wine imports will have to show the name and address of a business that:

- is based in the UK, Channel Islands or Isle of Man
- markets the wine under its own name

The name and address will be that of the Food Business Operator (FBO), or the importer, if the FBO is not based in the UK, Channel Islands or Isle of Man.

Wine that's labelled with the name and address of an importer does not need to use the words 'importer' or 'imported by'.

Wine labelled before 1 January 2024

Wine will not need to be re-labelled to comply with the rules if any of the following apply:

- it's already been labelled and is being aged
- it's already in the supply chain
- it was placed on the market before 1 January 2024

ATTENZIONE - Per FBO (food business operator) si intende chiunque venda, conservi, maneggi, prepari o distribuisca food. L'FBO deve avere sede in UK e essere registrato presso le autorità locali. Tutte le sopra menzionate attività possono essere effettuate in un luogo fisicamente individuato (fisso, mobile o temporaneo - food truck), da casa oppure online (sia social media che website).

Labelling wine imported directly into Scotland and Wales

There are no changes to the regulations for wine imported directly into Scotland and Wales. Imports to Scotland and Wales must be labelled with the address of the importer or bottler, or both.

Under the terms of the UK Internal Market Act 2020, products showing an FBO address can be marketed in Scotland and Wales where they were first imported into England. Similarly, products showing an importer can be marketed in England if they were first imported into Scotland or Wales.
